Marking Period:	1	Unit Title:	Interpretation Book Clubs: Analyzing Themes	Pacing:	45 Days
------------------------	---	--------------------	---	----------------	---------

Unit Summary:

Readers make a growth spurt in reading-reading texts that are worthy of serious, thoughtful reading.
Readers work together in book clubs to identify/interpret the themes that thread through their books.
Readers compare and contrast the ways in which themes are developed across texts.

Objectives:

Bend I

SWBAT take on the goal of becoming a better reader by working deliberately with specific goals.
SWBAT identify strong qualities of writing about reading.
SWBAT assess their reading progress.
SWBAT learn to read as a writer, notice details and annotate their reading.
SWBAT develop ideas about reading by re-reading, thinking carefully and locating ideas in texts.
SWBAT identify the perspective (point of view) of the story and the effects it has on the meaning of the story being told. *
SWBAT think analytically about reading and writing by dividing, ranking, and comparing information.

SWBAT revise their writing about reading while reading even further.

Bend II:

SWBAT see what is more significant in a text and make more observations as they read.

SWBAT read to pay close attention to the characters in the story, the problems they face, and the lessons they learn from those problems.

SWBAT learn from each other's ideas while reading, view text through the eyes of others.

SWBAT link ideas together to build larger theories or interpretations, and look for a larger truth or lesson while reading.

SWBAT read on and stay with the interpretation that they have made about their text, wear it like a lens and look for more places that fit with or change their idea.

SWBAT debate a different viewpoint on provocative questions related to the same book with other readers, aiming to persuade the other person, the other side.

SWBAT reflect on what they do in an effective book club that lifts the level of the clubs work.

Bend III:

SWBAT explore universal themes in texts, compare what's the same and what's different, and notice how the theme plays out in different texts.

SWBAT rethink themes to be more specific in contrasting how a theme plays out in different stories.

SWBAT think about how different characters connect to a theme, examine which characters best represent a particular theme through their thoughts, actions, and dialogue.

SWBAT think about the choices that authors make as a way to come to new insights as readers.

SWBAT focus on a part of a text where the author seems to be trying to achieve something and ask how they do it.

Essential Questions:

- How can you set goals to have a more thoughtful and mature reading life?
- Why is it important to think and write analytically while gaining insights from reading texts?
- What happens to the reader when a character seems to realize something or change in a text?

- Why is it important as a reader to study the choices the author did not make along with the choices the author did make?
- How do people connect through literature and art?
- How can one piece of writing communicate different messages to different people?

Marking Period:	2	Unit Title:	Tackling Complexity- Moving Up Levels of Nonfiction	Pacing:	45 Days

Unit Summary:

Readers investigate the ways nonfiction texts are becoming increasingly complex.
Readers tackle the increasing vocabulary demands of complex nonfiction.
Readers conduct independent research on a topic of their choice.

Objectives:

Bend One:

SWBAT self select texts that apply to personal interest, including the Arts.

SWBAT pay attention to and see more in a nonfiction text just as they do in a fiction text.
SWBAT use text features and knowledge of the topic to help orient themselves with complex nonfiction texts.
SWBAT assess their reading progress.
SWBAT explore ways a nonfiction text gets more complex.
SWBAT develop and draw on a toolkit of strategies to support them in determining the main ideas.
SWBAT search for clues all around unknown vocabulary words to figure out what the words mean.
SWBAT look inside words when they are really tricky to discover their meaning.
SWBAT study and consider the structure of complex texts to notice the overall structure and how the chunks of texts are built.
SWBAT notice when they are feeling confused or stuck and turn to tools and strategies for help.

SWBAT summarize a nonfiction text including the author's main ideas and how those main ideas relate to each other.

Bend Two:

SWBAT develop plans for primary research by reading nonfiction books.

SWBAT find sources to read on their topic.

SWBAT come to texts differently once they have some expertise on their topic.

SWBAT write to understand what they are learning as they read, and angle their writing so that it better explains the information.

SWBAT ask questions about a topic that allow them to think beyond and across the text.

SWBAT encounter multiple subtopics hidden inside of their topic, discover how the topics fit together, and why each part is important

SWBAT support big ideas with specific text-based details as they write about their reading.

SWBAT compare and contrast different sources on the same topic.

SWBAT consider the author's perspective, consider the trustworthiness of the source, and use this information to develop their own perspective.

SWBAT allow the research that they have done to change the way they think and feel about the topic, and live differently because of what they have researched.

Essential Questions:

- How can you read to determine the main idea in complex nonfiction?
- What strategies can readers rely on to make sense of complex vocabulary used by authors of nonfiction texts?
- How can readers obtain and apply knowledge from a variety of sources to discover as much as they can about a topic?
- In what ways will research of a topic allow a reader to develop a unique perspective from the author?
- How can we benefit from the varied interests of our peers?

Key: Technology Careers Interdisciplinary

Marking Period:	3	Unit Title:	Argument and Advocacy: Researching Debatable Issues	Pacing:	45 Days
------------------------	---	--------------------	---	----------------	---------

Unit Summary:

Readers research a provocative issue that can be considered from multiple perspectives and then consider counterargument and rebuttal essential to making a strong argument.

Objectives:Bend I

SWBAT recognize that a good argument is supported by reasons backed up by evidence.

SWBAT grasp both sides of an argument by focusing initially on texts that lay out the argument clearly, and then reading for both sides, when researching an argument.

SWBAT clarify their thinking and know what further research they need to do by allowing their research to spur quick flash-debates.

SWBAT research an issue by reading deeply about it, including background information, to become authorities on that issue.

SWBAT raise the level of their talk and their work in clubs.

SWBAT shift from taking in information to reflecting on that information to grow new ideas.

SWBAT summarize arguments by using their own words to express the most essential parts of the writer's argument, while being careful to not distort or change what the writer meant. *

SWBAT debate the issues they have been studying. *

Bend II

SWBAT develop new ideas about their issue and push themselves to ask new questions, then narrow their focus before conducting further research.

SWBAT annotate a text in a purposeful and deliberate way as they read and use the annotations to facilitate evidence-based conversation about the text.

SWBAT recognize difficult texts and draw on their portfolio of strategies to help them manage the difficulty.

SWBAT figure out an author's perspective in order to understand how his or her ideas fit into the issue, by seeing how that perspective fits into a progression of perspectives.

SWBAT think about texts in more than one way, considering not only content, but also the choices authors make that shape the content.

SWBAT approach an author's arguments skeptically, carefully evaluating evidence to determine whether it supports or weakens a claim.

SWBAT debate each other in their research groups by making a claim and then supporting it with evidence from their research. *

Bend III

SWBAT recognize that when researchers embark on a new research project they make a plan for that study, drawing on all that they have learned from previous research studies.

SWBAT identify how conversation with others can inform, or change their thinking. *

SWBAT analyze texts by reading across more than one text, paying attention to craft, and comparing and contrasting the choices made by the authors of each text.

SWBAT identify that experienced non-fiction readers bring all their critical lenses to reading nonfiction, in order to talk back to texts and become alert to moments when they are stirred to a strong emotional response.

SWBAT transfer and apply the work they have done in this unit to take a stand for their beliefs and to become powerful advocates for change in the world.

SWBAT understand that the work of looking for evidence, weighing, and evaluating arguments, and forming thoughtful judgments on important issues is not just work for school, but work for a lifetime.

Essential Questions:

- How can readers use complex nonfiction reading in order to research and make arguments about debatable issues?
- How does the text support or challenge a reader's argument or idea?
- How can you set goals to have a more thoughtful and mature reading life?
- Why is it important to think and write analytically while gaining insights from reading texts?
- How do we use our voices to express ourselves?
- How do we use body language to communicate?
- How does one piece of literature communicate different messages to different people?

Marking Period:	4	Unit Title:	Fantasy Book Clubs: The Magic of Themes and Symbols	Pacing:	45 Days
------------------------	---	--------------------	---	----------------	---------

Unit Summary:

Readers launch into fantasy book clubs and examine the quests that characters in fantasy novels are on, both internally and externally. Readers research nonfiction references that are part of fantasy books.

Objectives:

Bend I

SWBAT research the setting of a story by investigating clues about the time period and important magical elements, using covers, blurbs, and details from the beginning of the story.

SWBAT understand that fantasy readers expect to learn alongside the main character, and are alert to clues that the characters are in the midst of important learning experiences.

SWBAT use charts, timelines, and other graphic organizers to help track and analyze multiple problems and plotlines, as they tackle more complicated books.

SWBAT explore what they can learn about characters if they study them over time, delving deeply into their formation, motivations, and actions. *

SWBAT explore what reading and thinking work each book club is doing particularly well.

Bend II

SWBAT differentiate between literal and metaphorical (symbolizing conflicts between characters) dragons in fantasy stories and look to how these conflicts develop into themes.

SWBAT search fantasy stories to discover themes and lessons that might apply to their own lives.

SWBAT identify the quest structure that most fantasy stories follow and investigate both the internal and external quests of major characters.

SWBAT identify some themes as being so universal that they appear in more than one book and across history as well.

SWBAT evaluate their work by comparing it with a mental model of strong work and figuring out ways to improve it.

Bend III

SWBAT refer to nonfiction texts and references to more fully understand the world they are reading about.

SWBAT use a toolkit of strategies to figure out meanings of unfamiliar words in fantasy novels.

SWBAT identify characters in fantasy books as not all good or all bad, but rather complex, just as in life.

SWBAT figure out if repeated or highlighted images, objects, characters, or settings are a symbol of something else, and how the symbol might connect to a theme.

SWBAT interpret and understand the metaphors and allegories that exist in fantasy, gaining new insights into the real world.

Bend IV

SWBAT identify how cultures are portrayed in stories. *

SWBAT use what they know about archetypes to help make predictions, inferences, and interpretations about stories. *

SWBAT analyze a story using critical lenses, such as being alert to stereotypes and gender norms.

SWBAT apply their fantasy reading skills, such as interpretations and cross-text study, to help improve their skills in reading other genres.

SWBAT celebrate and reflect on all that they have learned and then find ways to carry those skills forward on their learning journeys.

Essential Questions:

- How can readers turn to nonfiction sources to explain some of the references in fantasy fiction?
- What strategies can readers rely on when investigating fantasy as a literary tradition?
- How can readers apply knowledge from a variety of sources to discover as much as they can about a fictional story?
- How will the thought processes developed through reading fantasy novels pay off in other genres as well?
- What makes a story good?
- How do we use our imagination in everyday life?
